Jackson State Forest contains large areas of mature second-growth redwoods that have not been logged since the virgin trees were cut. These redwoods provide recreation to the people of California, habitat for salmon, birds, plants and other wildlife, clean water, and a heritage for our children.

Pending plans will destroy the last areas of mature redwood forest in Jackson State Forest.

Six hundred acres in Hare Creek are currently being logged and logging is planned in Mitchell Creek and East Caspar.

Preserving our neighborhood forests and developing them for recreation would yield enduring benefits to the local economy and coastal quality of life.
